Sunbathing & Swimming

The coziest, easiest and most unique way of a Sanya holiday is to do nothing, think nothing, but lazing into a rest on the beach, or under the sunlight, or listen to music, or chat, or read, or soak into the waters. What's wrong with being a lazy bum for one day? Still Nothing! Above all, you are in Sanya!

Scuba Diving & Snorkeling

Sanya is one of the largest diving sites in China, enjoying over 10 meters of water visibility, befitting diving sports in all seasons for its favorable tropical weather conditions. Yalong Bay, Dadonghai, Xiaodonghai, Wushizhou Island and West Island are widely recognized as super sites for diving.

Off the coast of Sanya there are all sorts of marine creatures. The bright colored actinia not only glitters, but puzzles the photographer as well. Then the corals, they are the second most brilliant seascape under the water. Yalong Bay and Xiaodonghai are both national coral reserves in Sanya, where the underwater world is home to flowery hard and soft corals such as antlers, cotyloid corals etc. Actinia, clown fish, zebra fish and lobsters are the most frequency seen marine residents.

In addition, professional diving trainings are available in Sanya. The trainees can obtain NAUI (National Association of Underwater Instructors) certificates through training.

Surfing

Right time and right location is key for surfing. October every year to April the following year offer the best seasons. Relatively speaking, Sanya Bay may be too quiet, Yalong Bay and Dadong Sea have more waves. If you are a master-hand, try out the Shimei Bay, for it's the venue for world-level surfing games.

Dragging Parachute

Taking off and landing with freedom, soaring in the infinite sky like a free bird, embracing azure
